SYNOPSIS

The discontented wife of a simple fisherman, living in a humble cottage by the seaside with their frisky cat, prevails upon him to ask succeedingly more ambitious favors of a great fish he has caught but thrown back. First it is an improved cottage; next a castle; then she wants to be king, then pope; but when she demands to play God, she is restored to her original modest state and seems all the happier for it.

JOURNEY INTO JAZZ

THE FISHERMAN AND HIS WIFE, OPERA IN ONE ACT ON A LIBRETTO BY JOHN UPDIKE AFTER THE GRIMM FAIRYTALE

THE WORLD LOST ONE OF ITS GREATEST MUSICAL CITIZENS this year when Gunther Schuller died at age eighty-nine, June 21, 2015, the first day of summer. Planned celebrations this fall of the composer's 90th birthday (today, November 22) have now become memorials, celebrations of Schuller's remarkable life and impact on the world of music. First performances of some of the many pieces he had completed in recent months took place poignantly in his absence, his indefatigable personality shining through. The three works on this program are rarities, which, taken with the many performances of chamber music in and around Boston, indicate the amazing breadth of his accomplishments as a composer.

Very little escaped Gunther Schuller's voracious musical appetite, in terms of either genre or style. Consistent in technique and in the details of his language, he was eclectic in pursuit of form and affect. His catalog numbers about 200 pieces; he concentrated on works for large orchestra but wrote everything from solo works to operas, with a great many pieces of varying sizes for a Hindemithian array of unusual ensemble types. He wrote abstract pieces exploring principles of sound, works with theatrical elements defying categorization, and works in the traditional forms, such as concertos and symphonies. There are the Third Stream, jazz-hybrid works; pieces aimed at younger audiences and for pedagogy; pieces inspired by visual art, music for mourning, music for celebration, music for virtuosos, musical jokes.

All this, the core of Gunther Schuller's being, but he also embraced all facets of music beyond composition. The son of a New York Philharmonic violinist, he grew up in New York City and was a precociously gifted horn player and flutist. In his teens, he played in the orchestra of the American Ballet Theatre, was a member of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, and from 1945 to 1959 was principal horn of the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra. Between gigs at the opera under such conductors as Szell or Reiner, he worked with Miles Davis and Gil Evans. By the late 1950s he was working with some of the great innovators of jazz. He was especially associated with John Lewis and the Modern Jazz Quartet, and in 1957 presciently coined the term "Third Stream" to denote a marriage of contemporary classical music with jazz, expanding the formal and expressive potential of both styles. By the early 1960s he had given up performing on horn, but he remained a formidably learned and adventurous conductor until very late in his life, working with many of the major orchestras in the U.S. and Europe along with regional and student groups.

Schuller was of course also active on many other fronts, perhaps most significantly as a music educator and advocate. His first long-term faculty position was at the Tanglewood Music Center, to which he was appointed in 1963 by new Boston Symphony Orchestra music director Erich Leinsdorf to work with, then succeed, Aaron Copland. Schuller remained at Tanglewood for more than twenty years, eventually becoming director of the Tanglewood Music Center, and returned as a visiting composer, curator, and conductor on many occasions. He also served a ten-year stint as president of the New England Conservatory, where he introduced the first jazz program to a conservatory curriculum; while there he was central in the worldwide revival of ragtime. In the late 1970s Schuller solidified and extended his advocacy of contemporary music by starting his own music publishing and recording companies. Meanwhile, Schuller had also become an author. His first book was Horn Technique in 1962; he wrote two volumes of the history of jazz, Early Jazz and The Swing Era; a number of his essays were collected in Musings; and The Compleat Conductor was his treatise on preparation of orchestral music. The first volume of his memoirs, Gunther Schuller: A Life in Pursuit of Music and Beauty, was published in 2011. He was in the midst of completing the second (and final) volume at the time of his death this past June.

Gunther Schuller could and did compose under nearly any circumstances—in taxis, on airplanes, waiting for guests in the green room after a performance. By the time he stopped performing on horn in 1959 to concentrate on composition, he had composed two classics of the modern orchestral literature, Spectra and Seven Studies on Themes of Paul Klee. The kaleidoscopically characterful latter work has proved to be his most enduring orchestral hit. He wasn't at all immune to fashions and trends, but his motivation was more curiosity and the acquisition of new tools than modishness.

Among his three dozen or so concertos was his Concerto for Doublebass and Chamber Orchestra for Gary Karr, who played the premiere with the New York Philharmonic under Schuller's direction in 1968, and his Concerto Quaternio for violin, flute, oboe, trumpet, and orchestra, also for the Philharmonic. Even less standard is his Grand Concerto for Percussion and Keyboards, for eight percussionists, harp, celesta, and piano, premiered at Tanglewood in 2005. His Pulitzer Prize-winning Of Reminiscences and Reflections, composed in memory of his wife, was premiered by the Louisville Orchestra.

Naturally, many of his world premieres took place in and around Boston, by such groups as Collage New Music, Boston Musica Viva, the Pro Arte Chamber Orchestra, and others. Collage New Music premiered his song cycle Singing Poems earlier this month in Cambridge. A number of his works were premiered by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, including Museum Piece for Renaissance Instruments and Orchestra, commissioned by Boston's Museum of Fine Arts (1970; with New England Conservatory musicians also participating on instruments from the museum); Deaī, a work for two orchestras first played on a BSO tour in Tokyo, and more recently Where the Word Ends, one of the BSO's 125th anniversary commissions, premiered in Symphony Hall in 2009 under James Levine's direction. This past spring Andris Nelsons led the BSO in his Dreamscape, which was commissioned for the 75th anniversary of Tanglewood, where it was premiered in 2012. His recent Magical Trumpets, commissioned by the Tanglewood Music Center, was first performed during a Schuller tribute concert there this summer.

In the last couple of years, Gunther Schuller kvetched joyfully about how much work he had to do—he had nearly twenty commissions to complete for ensembles across the country. One of these was Games, commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the Boston Symphony Chamber Players and premiered in Jordon Hall in February 2014.

At the time of the premiere, the composer wrote, “I gave this work, commissioned by the Boston Symphony for the fiftieth anniversary of the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, the name Games. It occurred to me that play and games are easily relatable, with many potential commonalities. And indeed, as it turned out, I did play a lot of musical games, even some jokes—not of the guffaw kind, rather more subtle, and perhaps more specifically discernible to the musicians than the average audience listener. Many of these games have to do with rhythms, playing with considerable vertical complexity, i.e. four or five different rhythmic ideas bumping into each other or battling it out in some way amongst themselves.... In the second section of the work, the music becomes much calmer (an Adagio), offering mostly melodic lines, as solos for the players of the ensemble—double bass, clarinet, etc. This is followed by a scherzando burlesco section, in which I had even more fun and games, sometimes purposely silly (for example having the horn play only one note, a middle F-sharp, for half a minute or so, semi-quoting and distorting one of the horn's most popular musical “licks”). Other little, somewhat hidden/disguised quotations from the orchestral/operatic repertory abound. Near the very end of Games the viola tries desperately to be heard against an onslaught of boisterous rhythmic inundation. At the very end I steal the last few bars of Mozart's hilarious Musical Joke. Needless to say I had a lot of fun writing this piece, for which I gratefully thank my friend, the Boston Symphony Orchestra.”

The scoring is almost the full Chamber Players complement: flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon, and horn, two violins, viola, cello, and bass. Cast in a single movement in a few short sections, Games moves very quickly from one idea to the next, making the most of the various possible combinations of instrumental colors and characters in a virtuosic display of ensemble writing. There are cheeky quotations and little jokes throughout.

Journey into Jazz and The Fisherman and His Wife, though not unique in Schuller's catalog, are nonetheless outliers. Journey is a kind of concerto for improvising jazz instruments and orchestra, but with narrator; it's one of only a handful of explicitly jazz /Third Stream works. The Fisherman and His Wife is one of two Schuller operas, the other being The Visitation (1966). Interestingly, both pieces were broadcast on television: Journey into Jazz with the New York Philharmonic led by Schuller with Leonard Bernstein narrating, and The Fisherman and His Wife on WBZ-TV Boston.

Journey into Jazz was commissioned by Broadcast Music International (BMI) for the First International Jazz Festival in Washington, D.C. Schuller led the premiere with the National Symphony Orchestra and a quintet comprising Don Ellis, trumpet; Eric Dolphy, alto sax; Benny Golson, tenor sax; Richard Davis, bass, and Joe Cocuzzo, drums. Nat Hentoff wrote the text of the narration, which was spoken by the actor Ray Reinhardt. The Boston Modern Orchestra Project and Gil Rose recorded the piece in 2002, with the composer narrating and a quintet including his sons Edwin (bass) and George (drums), with David Ballou, trumpet; Matt Darriau, alto sax, and Jason Hunter, tenor sax.

Nat Hentoff's narrative for Journey into Jazz has a children's-book quality. It triggers specific illustrations from the instrumental group, particularly the trumpet, the instrument played by Eddie, the narrative's main character. Along with the trumpet, the jazz band also plays a role within the narrative as the kid figures out how to go from being a decent trumpet player to being a good jazz musician. The jazz band is given freedom to improvise at several points along the way, with the trumpet at first fully notated as an indicator of its "square" status. The balance of the orchestra provides mostly sparse, atmospheric accompaniment.

The hour-long The Fisherman and His Wife was written for Sarah Caldwell's Opera Company of Boston, and was commissioned by the Junior League of Boston to commemorate their 60th anniversary. They asked that it be dedicated to the children of Boston. Schuller chose the novelist John Updike to provide the libretto, which was based on a fairy tale retold by the Brothers Grimm. In her memoir Challenge, Sarah Caldwell reported a difficult working relationship because of the composer's very definite notions about the opera's staging. Schuller had particular, and rather conservative, ideas about the medium of opera, decrying (in the essay "The Future of Opera") its tendency to follow the trends of avant-garde theater. He was also working close to the wire. The end of the score contains the notation "End of opera! Hallelujah! The morning of the 1st performance, May 6, 1970 Boston." It was performed three times in early May 1970, and, as Odyssey Opera's Linda Osborn unearthed, recreated in a slightly different production filmed by WBZ-TV for television broadcast that fall. The original cast included mezzo-soprano Muriel Greenspon as the Wife; soprano Louisa Budd as the Cat; tenor David Lloyd as the Fisherman, and bass-baritone Donald Gramm as the Fish.

The story is likely a familiar one, existing in both European and Eastern versions. A fisherman and his wife live in squalor in a merde-urinous ditch (a "piss-pot" in Grimm, usually made nicer in translation). The fisherman catches a flounder, which tells him it's an enchanted prince and begs to be let go. Upon hearing this, the wife demands her husband go back to extract a wish from the fish for a nice house. The fish complies, and keeps complying with the wife's increasing ambition until, having been made Pope, she insists on being made God, at which point the couple is thrown back to their humble beginnings. In John Updike's libretto, they already start off in a better place—a humble cottage rather than a piss-pot, although it's "no bigger than a vinegar jug" and stinks of fish. The piece is a number-opera, with well-defined scenes and songs, paralleling the clearly demarcated scenes of the fairy tale.

The first character introduced is one not in Grimm, the Cat, whom the Wife uses as a foil to complain to in an aria about her wretched lot. Over sustained harmonies, instrumental details reflect and punctuate the stage action in the score and little touches of the libretto—a little woodwind scale accompanying the Cat's leap onto the bed, the clarinet's upward rush and oboe trill for the Wife's mention of minnows. The Fisherman's first aria closely follows, in a positive vein, the wife's, establishing the balances that inform the entire opera. At the end of the Fisherman's scene with the Fish, the Cat sings directly to the audience: "A fish that can talk! I simply cannot believe it!" Which is pretty funny. This little moment, like other such details, echoes elsewhere in the piece, which of course is full of varied repetitions and motifs reflected in both the libretto and the music.

The Wife's increasingly outlandish requests also create the larger trajectory whereby the music increases generally in activity and tension. Upon the Wife's becoming King, time stands still: over improvised instrumental passages, the perks of kingship are shouted from opposite sides of the stage. Her most extreme request, to be made God, is accompanied by much reduced orchestration, like a shocked, nervous hush.

In her research on the opera, Linda Osborn found details and photos of the original staging, as well as the WBZ film. The fish is a halibut—a more stageworthy fish than a flounder, evidently. The costumes and sets are bigger and more glorious to the point of absurdity with each elevation of the wife's position. The staging also included some absurdist elements, such as a huge finger with a ring when the Wife-as-Pope demands the Fisherman kiss her ring. The Cat's status changes in parallel with the Wife's. In the film version, these elements are even more amplified and ridiculous. In spite of its evident charms and famous authors (both future Pulitzer winners), The Fisherman and His Wife seems to have had no further productions after its original run and television broadcast.

GIL ROSE, ARTISTIC DIRECTOR

LIZ LINDER

Gil Rose is a conductor helping to shape the future of classical music. His dynamic performances and many recordings have garnered international critical praise.

In 1996, Mr. Rose founded the Boston Modern Orchestra Project (BMOP), the foremost professional orchestra dedicated exclusively to performing and recording symphonic music of the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. Under his leadership, BMOP's unique programming and high performance standards have attracted critical acclaim.

As a guest conductor on both the opera and symphonic platforms, he made his Tanglewood debut in 2002 and in 2003 debuted with the Netherlands Radio Symphony at the Holland Festival. He has led the American Composers Orchestra, Warsaw Philharmonic, National Symphony Orchestra of the Ukraine, Cleveland Chamber Symphony, Orchestra della Svizzera Italiana, and the National Orchestra of Porto and made his Japanese debut in 2015 substituting for Seiji Ozawa at the Matsumoto Festival conducting Berlioz's Béatrice et Bénédict.

Over the past decade, Mr. Rose has also built a reputation as one of the country's most inventive and versatile opera conductors. He recently announced the formation of Odyssey Opera, an inventive company dedicated to presenting eclectic operatic repertoire in a variety of formats. The company debuted in September 2013 to critical acclaim with a 6-hour concert production of Wagner's Rienzi. Subsequent presentations have included concert performances of Korngold's Die tote Stadt and Massenet's Le Cid, along with two critically acclaimed Spring Festivals of staged opera. Prior to founding Odyssey Opera he led Opera Boston as its Music Director starting in 2003, and in 2010 was appointed the company's first Artistic Director. Mr. Rose led Opera Boston in several American and New England premieres including Shostakovich's The Nose, Donizetti's Maria Padilla, Hindemith's Cardillac, and Peter Eötvös's Angels in America. In 2009, Mr. Rose led the world premiere of Zhou Long's Madame White Snake, which won the Pulitzer Prize for Music in 2011.

Mr. Rose and BMOP recently partnered with the American Repertory Theater, Chicago Opera Theater, and the MIT Media Lab to create the world premiere of composer Tod Machover's Death and the Powers (a runner-up for the 2012 Pulitzer Prize in Music). He conducted this seminal multimedia work at its world premiere at the Opera Garnier in Monte Carlo, Monaco, in September 2010, and also led its United States premiere in Boston and a subsequent performance at Chicago Opera Theater.

An active recording artist, Gil Rose serves as the executive producer of the BMOP/sound recording label. His extensive discography includes world premiere recordings of music by John Cage, Lukas Foss, Charles Fussell, Michael Gandolfi, Tod Machover, Steven Mackey, Evan Ziporyn, and many others on such labels as Albany, Arsis, Chandos, ECM, Naxos, New World, and BMOP/sound.

He has led the longstanding Monadnock Music Festival in historic Peterborough, NH, since his appointment as Artistic Director in 2012, conducting several premieres and making his opera stage directing debut in two revivals of operas by Dominick Argento, as well as conducting, directing and producing the world premier recording of Ned Rorem's opera Our Town.

He has curated the Fromm Concerts at Harvard three times and served as the first curator of the Ditson Festival of Music at Boston's Institute of Contemporary Art. As an educator Mr. Rose served five years as director of Orchestral Activities at Tufts University and in 2012 he joined the faculty of Northeastern University as Artist-in-Residence and Professor of Practice.

In 2007, Mr. Rose was awarded Columbia University's prestigious Ditson Award as well as an ASCAP Concert Music Award for his exemplary commitment to new American music. He is a three-time Grammy Award nominee.

Founded in 2013 by Artistic Director/Conductor Gil Rose, ODYSSEY OPERA presents adventurous and eclectic works that affirm opera as a powerful expression of the human experience. Its world-class artists perform the operatic repertoire from its historic beginnings through lesser-known masterpieces to contemporary new works and commissions in a variety of formats and venues. Odyssey Opera sets standards of high musical and theatrical excellence and innovative programming to advance the operatic genre beyond the familiar and into undiscovered territory. Odyssey Opera takes its audience on a journey to places they've never been before.

THE BOSTON MODERN ORCHESTRA PROJECT

is the premier orchestra in the United States dedicated exclusively to commissioning, performing, and recording music of the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. A unique institution of crucial artistic importance to today's musical world, the Boston Modern Orchestra Project (BMOP) exists to disseminate exceptional orchestral music of the present and recent past via performances and recordings of the highest caliber.

Founded by Artistic Director Gil Rose in 1996, BMOP has championed composers whose careers span nine decades. Each season, Rose brings BMOP's award-winning orchestra, renowned soloists, and influential composers to the stage of New England Conservatory's historic Jordan Hall in a series that offers the most diverse orchestral programming in the city. The musicians of BMOP are consistently lauded for the energy, imagination, and passion with which they infuse the music of the present era.

BMOP's distinguished and adventurous track record includes premieres and recordings of monumental and provocative new works such as John Harbison's ballet Ulysses, Louis Andriessen's Trilogy of the Last Day, and Tod Machover's Death and the Powers. A perennial winner of the ASCAP Award for Adventurous Programming, the orchestra has been featured at festivals including Opera Unlimited, the Ditson Festival of Contemporary Music with the ICA/Boston, Tanglewood, the Boston Cyberarts Festival, the Festival of New American Music (Sacramento, CA), Music on the Edge (Pittsburgh, PA), and the MATA Festival in New York. BMOP has actively pursued a role in music education through composer residencies, collaborations with colleges, and an ongoing relationship with the New England Conservatory, where it is Affiliate Orchestra for New Music. The musicians of BMOP are equally at home in Symphony Hall, Weill Recital Hall at Carnegie Hall, and in Cambridge's Club Oberon and Boston's Club Café, where they pursued a popular, composer-led Club Concert series from 2003 to 2012.

BMOP/sound, BMOP's independent record label, was created in 2008 to provide a platform for BMOP's extensive archive of music, as well as to provide widespread, top-quality, permanent access to both classics of the 20th century and the music of today's most innovative composers. BMOP/sound has garnered praise from the national and international press; it is the recipient of five Grammy Award nominations and its releases have appeared on the year-end "Best of" lists of The New York Times, The Boston Globe, National Public Radio, Time Out New York, American Record Guide, Downbeat Magazine, WBUR, NewMusicBox, and others.

BMOP expands the horizon of a typical "night at the symphony." Admired, praised, and sought after by artists, presenters, critics, and audiophiles, BMOP and BMOP/sound are uniquely positioned to redefine the new music concert and recording experience.
